INDIANS VISIT TINLEY PARK PUBLIC SCHOOL

A group of Indians stationed at the World's Fair were recently conducted by Mr. John Boeyer of Tinley Park on a trip through the International Harvester Company's plants and on a visit to Henry Henke's farm near Tinley Park.

The party consisted of three different tribes, the Winnebago, Wisconsin tribe, the Hopi, Arizona tribe, and the Navajo, New Mexico tribe. Most of them were of the Hopi tribe of Arizona who at one time roamed around in Illinois. Mr. Boeyer showed them the old Indian boundary line which is southeast of Tinley Park.

After visiting Mr. Boeyer's farm and Henry Henke's farm, the group on the return trip stopped at the Tinley Park school. Mr. Fulton was kind enough to open the school dormitory at Tinley Park so all the children had a chance to see the Indians. The teacher from the 166th District brought her children to the Henry Henke farm to see the Indians.

These Indians, who are all farming on a small scale, seemed to appreciate their short country trip immensely. They wanted to see every animal and were very much surprised to see the modern methods of farming.

Mr. Boeyer explained to them that all the farms which they saw on the trip were run by the third generation. He pointed out that the grandparents had come from foreign countries somewhere and that the prosperity of our present farmers was the result of hard work thru all these years.

Tinley Park Legion Aux. Unit

Mrs. Lester N. Stoltenberg,
Publicity Chairman

On Friday, Nov. 10, 1933, the Tinley Park Legion Auxiliary held their regular meeting. In observance of Armistice Day the Unit Activity Chairman and committees were in charge of a short program which was presented during the meeting. The members of the Tinley Park Post of the American Legion and their families were invited for a social evening. The meeting came to order with our president presiding, and after the usual formalities the various committees gave their reports.

Our rehabilitation chairman gave a very interesting report of the work she and her committee have accomplished during the month. A summary of which follows: On Nov. 1, 1933 they went to Edward Hines Jr. Hospital and took the following articles for the patients there: 419 spools for making shelves, 265 were donated by Mrs. Haynard of West Chicago, 170 small packages of matches, 24 pair of socks, 3 shirts, 43 three cent stamps of which the Niagara Girls donated a book also several by Mrs. J. Schaefer and one carton of cigarettes which the Tinley Park Unit sends each month. They worked at the Hospital from 10:30 a. m. to 4 p. m. and spent most of their time doing office work and delivering different articles. Mrs. Felton wishes to thank the ladies of the Unit and friends who so kindly donated these articles to the disabled men at Edward Hines Hospital.

A Christmas Eve supper for the boys at Forty and Eight Camp in Orland Park is being planned by the Unit. Members who wish to call on the boys there are welcome to do so and donations of cigarettes would be greatly appreciated.

The ladies of the auxiliary sang a song "To The Legion", which was written by our music chairman. The song was beautifully rendered and was greatly appreciated by our guests. After this the song "Together" was sung in rondo fashion, in which all joined lustily.

Our Americanism Chairman, had the girls of the Niagara Club give a very appropriate playlet in commemoration of Armistice Day. It was enjoyed by all.

The meeting was adjourned about ten o'clock and lunch was served in the basement. The refreshment committee had a lovely table arranged and decorated in red, white and blue. A large cake centered the table and was beautifully decorated with the inscription "For God and Country".

The menu consisted of spaghetti, a baked apple, cookies, cake and coffee. In behalf of the Tinley Park Post, Commander Maybee spoke a few words of appreciation. Cards and buns were then played and prizes were given to the winners. The evening was enjoyed by all and the Unit wishes to thank every one who assisted in making the evening a success.

On account of our next regular meeting falling on Achievement night, our next meeting will be held Monday evening, November 20th. Members please take note.

Orland Choir Leader To Relinquish Work

It was with deep regret that announcement was made that, temporarily at least, the choir director Mr. Wunderlich would relinquish his work in the Orland community. It was understood and expected when Mr. Wunderlich assumed his duties with the Orland M. E. church, that the arrangement was only for a short time, but nevertheless, the choir had begun to hope that his stay could be stretched along indefinitely. In the short time he has been with the Orland church, he has accomplished so much good and has endeared himself to them, so that the severance is difficult to anticipate. He is both an artist and executive and has wielded a masterful hand in the direction and building up of the Orland M. E. choir. His work with them, entirely without financial remuneration, was undertaken with a fine sense of Christian helpfulness and at great personal sacrifice to himself. He leaves to take up other duties that he has been called upon to assume, with the promise that whenever possible he will be back again. He leaves with the appreciation and thanks of the church and the community who wish him much success in his new endeavors.

The various departments of the paper and the different activities fostered by it were each taken up in detail by individuals, especially assigned to that purpose with the idea in mind of showing the advantage of the possibilities for good in the individual Methodist and to the church in general in the regular subscribing and reading of the publication.

Dangerous Crossing At Frankfort Should Be Protected

Since the fatal crossing accident in Frankfort last week in which Geo. Mitchell was killed by a fast Michigan Central freight train, the public at large feels that the interstate commerce commission should compel the Michigan Central railroad to install electric crossing flashers at this dangerous crossing which has been the scene of five accidents already. The visibility at this crossing is very poor and there is no protection of any kind provided for at present. The railroad has flashers at other crossings on paved roads east and west of Frankfort. The Frankfort village board took up the flasher matter with the railroad company some time ago, but the railroad did nothing about the matter. It is high time that the railroad did something to protect the public at the dangerous Frankfort crossing before any more lives are lost.

Have You Heard The Big Scandal?

RECORD OF LIFE

The average man of fifty is found to have worked 6,500 days, slept 6,000 days, walked 800 days, played 4,000 days, eaten 1,500 days, been sick 500 days and listened to the squawk of the pessimist all his days. —San Jose (Calif.) Mercury Herald.

To make Children

EAT

Don't force children to eat! The girl or boy who has no appetite has stasis—which means the child is sluggish. But cathartics have caused more constipation than they ever cured! The "California treatment" is best—just pure syrup of figs. Try this for a few days, then see how eagerly your youngster will eat.

Stimulate the colon and that child with a finicky appetite will devour everything set before him. Here's the simple treatment that does more for babies or older children than all the diets, fad foods, or tonics.

Nature has provided the "medicine" you'll need to stir your child's colon muscles into proper action. California syrup of figs. Pure, delicious, harmless. It acts on the lower colon—where the trouble is. It has no ill effects on the intestines.

Begin tonight, with this marvelous "California treatment." Any druggist has California syrup of figs, all bottled, with directions. Use enough the first time to cleanse the clogged colon of every bit of poison and hard waste. Then just a little twice a week until the child's appetite, color, weight and spirits tell you the stasis is gone. Whenever a cold or other upset clogs the system again, use this natural vegetable laxative instead of drastic drugs.

WARNING! There are dealers who practice substitution. Be sure to protect your child by looking for the name CALIFORNIA on the bottle.

Why Liquid Laxatives Do You No Harm

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can be controlled. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement, and with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it!

An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is syrup pepsin. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help, as they do in the case of cathartics containing mineral drugs. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Member N. R. A.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

JERRY MUSKRAT WAKES UP JUST IN TIME

NEVER in all his life had Jerry Muskrat been quite so flattered as he was by the admiration of Reddy Fox for his skill as a builder of houses. Listening to the praise which fairly dripped from Reddy's smooth tongue, Jerry actually forgot who was talking. At least, he forgot that Reddy always had been an enemy. It was hard to believe that such a handsome fellow and such a pleasant spoken fellow could possibly mean any harm. And he seemed so much in earnest when he said that if only Jerry would come with him and show him how to closed, as if trying to picture to himself what such a house would look like. "I certainly would be the envy of everybody on the Green Meadows and in the Green Forest. I believe such a house would tickle Mrs. Reddy almost to death. I must bring her over here to see your house."

Once more Jerry was growing so interested in the idea of that house that without really knowing it he was padding toward the bank. Then as his feet touched bottom he remembered and made a half circle to deeper water and there floated lazily. "I'll be glad to have you bring Mrs. Reddy to see my house," said he. "I am afraid it isn't possible for me to show you how to build, but as I told you before I will be glad to tell you how."

Reddy jumped lightly to his feet. "That will be fine," he replied. "I have an engagement now, but if you have time to spare tomorrow night I will come over at about this time and we'll talk the idea over. I certainly would like a house like that." He glanced longingly towards Jerry's new house out in the Smiling Pool, then, wishing Jerry good-night, trotted away.

build a house he would be the happiest Fox in the world that Jerry had it on the tip of his tongue to say that he would do that very thing and be glad to.

Jerry actually had paddled in to the bank and was beginning to climb out as Reddy said this. And then, as so often happens with a ton—that is too smooth, Reddy's tongue tripped him up. If only he hadn't said that Jerry could make him the happiest Fox in the world! That word Fox waked Jerry up just in time. He wasn't really asleep, you know, but he was so flattered and so interested in what Reddy had said that he had quite forgotten who was talking.

But at that word Fox suddenly realized what he was about to do. In just one wee little minute more he would have been right out on the bank within easy jumping distance of Reddy. Hastily he pushed himself out from the bank and swam far enough out in the Smiling Pool to feel absolutely safe. Then he looked up at Reddy to see if the latter had noticed the haste with which he had left the bank instead of climbing out on it. He thought there was just a trace of disappointment in Reddy's eyes, but it passed so quickly he couldn't be sure.

Apparently Reddy could think of nothing but a new house like Jerry's, only on land and big enough for him. He went right on talking just as if he hadn't noticed Jerry's action at all. "If you only could show me how, I believe I could build a house. Anyway, I would be willing to try and to work hard," said he with his eyes half

GRAPHIC GOLF

HEAVY HEADED IRONS

TOMMY ARMOUR'S rifle iron shots have long been the admiration of all golfers, duffer and star alike. Although Armour realizes the futility of an average player hitting a long, straight iron that will compare favorably with those of the powerful wristed pros, he does think that the high handicap player can help himself considerably by proper selection of iron clubs. The limber shafted, light headed irons in his estimation are not the best suited ones for the game. Most of the better players have clubs with rather heavy heads which at least give the suggestion that there is something strong and solid in their hands. He advises such heads for the average player, coupled with a slight flexibility in the shaft which should increase proportionately for the longer

SOFTER LIGHTS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THESE cooler nights
And kinder days,
These softer lights
And autumn haze,
Are like the years
Of later life,
After the tears
And joy and strife.

Less red the flow'rs,
Less green the grass,
But quiet hours
In peace we pass.
Though gone the May,
The summer spent,
We are less gay
But more content.

In spring we fear
The thought of fall,
But, autumn here,
Mind not at all;
For living writes
No falser page
Than softer lights
And quiet age.

To Be Well See That They Function Properly

YOUR KIDNEYS! Do you realize what an important part they play in your bodily health and length of life? They are the blood filters. Every 24 hours they excrete more than 500 grains of poisonous waste. Thus your kidneys are literally sentinels of your health.

It is well, then, to keep careful watch of your kidneys. If they fail to do their work fully, there is slow poisoning of the system, which may lead to many serious conditions.

Disordered kidney action and bladder irritations may give rise to scanty, painful or too frequent passage and getting up at night. One is apt to feel a dull, nagging backache, drowsy headaches and dizziness.

While, naturally, temporary irregularities may occur, if the condition persists, it is well to look to your kidneys. There is positive danger in neglecting disordered kidney action.

If you have any reason to believe your kidneys are not functioning properly, why not give Doan's Pills a trial? No other advertised diuretic has such world-wide use. None is so well recommended.

Get Doan's today. Your druggist has them.

PAUL IN ATHENS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 17:16-34.
GOLDEN TEXT—For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring. Acts 17:28.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Worshipping God.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Preaching in a Famous City.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Do We Worship?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Seeking and Finding God.

I. Athens Full of Idols (v. 16). Athens was the intellectual metropolis of the world at that time, the home of the world's greatest eloquence and philosophy. In spite of this fact the city was given wholly to idolatry, which so stirred Paul's spirit that he was there moved to preach the gospel.

II. The Parties Concerned in the Controversy (vv. 17-21).

1. The Jews (v. 17). True to his usual custom, Paul went into the synagogue and entered into earnest argument with the Jews.

2. The devout persons (v. 17). This doubtless included proselytes to the Jewish faith.

3. The philosophers (v. 18). From the Jews and devout persons he turned to such as were found in the market place. Here he came into touch with Epicurean and Stoic philosophers.

When these philosophers heard his preaching they desired to know what new doctrine he preached, so they invited him to the Areopagus where he might speak to them. They inquired as to what this "babbler" might say. The word "babbler" means literally "seed-picker." They conceived Paul as a globe-trotter who had gathered up seeds of truth or error here and there over the world and that he was somewhat like themselves, interested in talking about that which he had seen and heard.

III. Paul's Address on Mars' Hill (vv. 22-31).

1. The introduction (vv. 22, 23). He introduced his discourse in a courteous manner, stating that he perceived that they were very religious. He did not accuse them of superstition as the A. V. would make it, but as the A. R. V., "very religious." He declared that as he was viewing their city he beheld an altar with an inscription, "To the unknown God." He proceeded at once to connect it with the idea of the true God, implying that this altar had been erected to him.

2. The body of his discourse (vv. 24-31).

a. A declaration concerning God (vv. 24, 25).

(1) The true God created the material universe (v. 24). This was a direct blow at the philosophy of both the Epicureans and the Stoics.

(2) God's spirituality and immensity (vv. 24, 25). Being essentially spiritual he demands heart-service, and being transcendent above all he is not confined to earthly temples.

(3) His active providence (v. 25). He gives existence to all things. He bestows needed gifts upon all creatures, and as sovereign directs all things.

b. His declarations concerning man (vv. 26-31).

(1) His common origin (v. 26). This was a blow at the foolish Athenian pride which supposed that they were superior to all other people. This proposition he proved from their own literature (v. 28). He argued that if men are the offspring of God and bear his likeness, it is utterly folly to make images such as the idols were.

(2) Nations have their place by the sovereign purpose of God (v. 26). He argued that the position and mission of each nation is of God's appointment.

(3) Men should seek God (v. 27). His goodness and grace in supplying all human needs, and His sovereign ordering of the affairs of nations should move men to see and seek God.

(4) Pressing obligations to repent (vv. 30, 31). This was his supreme message. Though God had formerly passed over the idolatrous practice of the nations, he now calls all men to repent in preparation for the coming day of judgment, the guarantee of which is the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

IV. The Results of Paul's Preaching (vv. 32-34).

1. Some mocked (v. 32). Men and women are today mocking the preacher who dares to preach the coming judgment.

2. Some procrastinated (v. 32). This is the common way of men. Many of them do not mock, but they hesitate to accept and act upon the urgency of the message.

3. Some believed (v. 34). Wherever the gospel is preached there are some who believe and are saved.

Commonplace Lives

The most commonplace lives have about them possibilities of romance, tragedy, and humor that discover themselves to the one who ministers to these lives with a brave and resolute heart.

Value of Prayer

Let us value prayer more! Let us use it more as a means! We can have the music of heaven falling down and filling our lives with the sweetest of melodies, of comfort and joy, if we will.

FARM
POULTRYEASY TO DISCOVER
BABY CHICKS' SEXJapanese System Is Seen as Great Saving.

Keen eyesight and nimble fingers may be as important to the poultry man as his knowledge of rations, in the future, should a system of sex determination now being introduced in Japan gain favor in America.

Mr. Yogo, Japanese scientist, started poultry experts recently at the International Baby Chick association convention at Grand Rapids, Mich., by determining the sex of 100 one-day-old baby chicks in six and a half minutes, without an error.

Skeptical poultry experts, after Yogo had completed his demonstration, opened the chicks and through post-mortem examinations checked up on the accuracy of the determinations.

Practical application of the Japanese system is seen in the savings that may be effected by destroying the male chicks, which eat quite as much as the female chicks, before their uselessness is exposed by development of mannish characteristics. In the case of Leghorns, which are of little value as broilers, this is said to be an important item.

With the heavier breeds, the male chicks may be disposed of to broiler producing plants. Saving on brooding equipment is a third possible benefit.

Fast-Growing Chickens

Eat More Than Unthrifty

Thrifty, fast-growing chickens eat more than the unthrifty. Heavy layers eat more than poor layers. In neither case, however, is the difference in the quantities of feed consumed as great as the difference in the results obtained. Poor birds eat much more proportionately than good ones. The reason is because chicks that grow well and hens that lay well are birds which constitutionally are able to make full use of all feed taken into the system, while much of that eaten by those which are inferior in this respect passes through the system undigested.

The fundamental principle in modern poultry feeding is to feed so liberally that not a bird in the flock will ever be unable to get all the feed it wants. In doing this feed is kept before the flock practically all the time. In renewing supplies of the different kinds of feed at regular intervals, it is often noticed that the consumption from day to day or from week to week is variable. This is most noticeable with adult stock. It is apt to be overlooked in chickens because they constantly require larger amounts until full grown. Because of this variability close weighings of feed consumed in short periods, when taken as the basis of computation for the full period of growth, or for laying hens for a year are seldom accurate.

Screens Under Roosts

Found Good Investment

Inventions that will prevent chickens from scratching in and walking over the droppings in the pen are coming into use and are proving popular because profitable. Dropping boards under roosts are regarded as a common menace wherever they exist. A poultryman who found this out to his sorrow describes how he protected his birds from this danger.

"We took 6-inch fencing boards and made a rectangle 5 by 12 feet (the size of the dropping board tables), nailing the boards so as to make a box 6 inches high. Over this we stretched 2-inch mesh poultry netting, drawing it tight, and then placed the roosts on top. When we wish to clean the dropping boards we need only prop up the whole roost section. No disease will be picked up from the night droppings. Manure will not be carried from dropping boards to nests nor will pullets be sitting on droppings instead of on roosts. This method is one that any farmer can employ and the expense is very low when compared with the benefits. This is worth keeping in mind when planning the winter poultry house."

Chicken Pox Protection

To protect from chicken pox remove all affected birds from the flock. Put them in a pen as far away from the main flock as possible. See that all stagnant water is taken away, as this breeds mosquitoes, and these pests transmit the chicken pox. The entire flock should then be vaccinated with pox vaccine by pulling five feathers from the leg of the bird and, with a small brush, applying the vaccine to the holes where the feathers were pulled.

Delaying Fall Molt

It is evident that the longer the fall molt on all of the birds can be delayed, the higher will be the average egg production. It is just as important, however, not to go to the other extreme and delay molt so late in the fall that the birds do not have time to get their new coat of feathers started before cold weather sets in. The normal rest period appears to be from two to three months. The early molt usually takes a much longer time to grow new feathers.

Birds' Songs Recorded
After Many Failures

It took modern engineering and science to capture the songs of birds where the musical and imitative arts had failed, says the Literary Digest. Bird songs are among the most elusive of melodies. Musicians have often tried to write them down, but most birds do not sing in the man-made scale. Their notes are usually not whole or half tones, but may be quarter tones or other fractions.

The apparatus which has first successfully recorded bird melodies was devised under the direction of Albert R. Brand, associate in ornithology, American Museum of Natural History. This recording machine is essentially an adaptation of the equipment used in recording the human voice in talking picture studios.

The longest shot ever taken with the apparatus was during the recording of the song of a common oriole. The truck was 250 feet from the microphone, and the microphone and mirror were at least another 100 yards from the bird. At that distance it was hard to distinguish the bird through the mirror sight, yet the sound picture was completely satisfactory.

thanks to an amazing new Laundry Soap

NEW LAUNDRY SOAP DISCOVERY
WELCOMED BY HOUSEWIVES

A still faster-washing soap that gets clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter yet can't hurt anything plain water won't WASHDAY in over a million homes has been revolutionized by an amazing new Laundry Soap Discovery of Procter & Gamble—America's largest soap-makers. Up and down the country, it is completely changing women's ideas of quick, easy washing, safe washing, and white clothes!

This remarkable invention is an utterly new type laundry soap. A soap that multiplies itself 500 times in suds. Which means you get at least twice as much suds as from old-style soaps. A still faster-washing, still whiter-washing soap that's utterly SAFE for colors, fabrics, and hands. This remarkable new discovery is called OXYDOL. And you'll find to your surprise that it makes other soaps—"granulated," bar or flake—hopelessly out-of-date.

Women believed they had the fastest soap already! Then found it was slow, alongside OXYDOL. For OXYDOL utterly banishes boiling. It ends washboard scrubbing. It cuts soaking time to 15 minutes—gets clothes out far sooner. They believed they had the whitest washes they could possibly get. And are now amazed by washes 4 to 5 shades whiter than before.

By impartial scientific test, ONE washing with OXYDOL gets clothes whiter than 2 to 4 washes with other soaps. But that's not all!

You'll find clothes actually last longer, washed with this new soap. That the daintiest colors do NOT fade. That it is easier on hands than any soap you've ever used. For no strong agents, no chemical bleaches are in OXYDOL. Just pure soap elements so blended with others as to protect clothes against fading. OXYDOL simply can't hurt anything clear water won't!

DISSOLVES Dirt—In Any Water,
Hard or Soft

Its creamy, "free-acting" suds dissolve dirt out in 15 minutes. No boiling, no back-breaking scrubbing is necessary. Nor any "water-softener," either. For the right amount of water-softener is already there.

Different from ordinary soaps, OXYDOL is specially fitted to water conditions in each district where it is sold. The water in this district, for example, has been tested for "hardness" by expert chemists. The OXYDOL you buy here contains just the right proportion of "softener" to fit it.

With OXYDOL you'll do your wash in 25% to 40% less time. You'll get a whiter, sweeter-smelling wash than ever before. Everything will iron beautifully—no soap streaks or smudges anywhere. And you'll never be bothered with fading colors or red, soap-bitten hands.

These things we promise you. Whatever your former favorite, try OXYDOL next time you wash. You'll never go back to slower soaps or harsher soaps again! Procter & Gamble. 3327

St. Camillus Ass'n to Sponsor Card Party, Dance, Bakery Sale

A harvest card party, dance and bakery sale sponsored by St. Camillus Association will be held Friday, November 17, at the Joliet Catholic High School, both afternoon and evening.

According to Mrs. J. V. "This is
GAS AND OIL
MONEY
IT OR NOT?"

Sally: "Really? Tell me about it, Helen." Helen: "Well, as I use the car most of the time these days and actually buy the oil and gas, Dick thought it a good plan to turn the car budget over to me entirely." Sally: "How does that give you extra money?" Helen: "I have more time than Dick and have learned some surprising things about the cost of car operation. Dick thought all gas and oil sold at approximately the same price were of equal value. When the motor broke down, he considered it just hard luck and paid the repair bill." Sally: "Isn't it?" Helen: "No! It is poor motor protection. More than half the entire motor wear occurs during the few minutes of starting when the motor is cold. Only one brand of oil—Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil—penetrates the metal so that a portion of it, nearly a quart, stays up in your motor, greatly reducing the wear. So checking back on repair bills that were paid before I changed to Conoco, we've saved a lot of money this last year." Sally: "What about gasoline?" Helen: "To me that choice depended on quick starting—Dick used to choke the car until he was wild. It wasted so much gasoline in cold weather—ran the battery down and the nerves, too. With Conoco Bronze, the motor starts at the first turn and has power galore—goes further on each gallon and is anti-knock also. So you see how I did it?" Sally: "I certainly do, Helen—and I think you're a very clever girl!"

CONOCO
at the sign of the Red Triangle

Full motor protection, especially in cold motor starting, can be found only in Conoco Germ Processed (Paraffin Base) Motor Oil because the penetrative oiliness, called "The Hidden Quart" stays up in your motor and never drains away.
Instant Starting and Lightning Pick-up can best be obtained with Conoco Bronze Gasoline, and without sacrifice of Long Mileage, Greater Power and Anti-Knock advantages. For cold weather starting it cannot be excelled.

Everyone had a delightful time.

"On the stage? What shows have you been in lately? I've seen you before—seems like it was in the movies, though. I didn't recognize you that day—on account of those dark glasses, but I could swear—"

Beatrice rose. "I'm afraid we're wasting a lot of your time. I am awfully busy myself, too. I have an idea that Rocky will be quite willing to give Doris a divorce, but that is only my own opinion, and it hasn't the slightest weight really, as I know absolutely nothing about it. This young woman is hardly a fly-by-night sweetheart of Rocky's as you seem to suppose. She happens to be a friend of mine whom Rocky has helped out of a rather tight scrape—"

Molly rose. She whistled as she did so. "What a sap I've been!"

Doris stared blankly. Beatrice bit her lip.

"This is interesting," continued Molly. "I knew I'd seen you in the movies—in the news reel it was."

Beatrice found her voice. "You're mistaken."

"Am I really?" She turned to Beatrice. "What part will you play in the big scene, young lady? Isn't there some law about concealing a criminal? I wouldn't be in your shoes for the world—Miss St. Gardens. I really wouldn't."

"I think you'd better go," said Beatrice.

"After I've telephoned the police. Boy, will this be a sensation! Am I lucky? I can see my picture in every paper in the country. Along with yours, of course." She inclined her head to Doris mockingly. "I see it all now. Schoolgirls together. Rocky the big Galahad. Nobody would ever think of looking here for Diane Merrell! No wonder you didn't want to see me."

Beatrice turned to Doris. "Rocky ought to be here soon. Perhaps he can talk some sense into her."

"I'm a woman of impulse," said Molly, "and I feel a strange whim rushing over me to call up the police."

Beatrice closed her eyes. Then she said in a calm tone: "Let me show you the telephone."

Molly with a small sneer on her pretty mouth took a last look at Doris and followed Beatrice.

Beatrice opened a door. It led to a small clothes closet. Before Molly quite knew what was happening Beatrice had pushed her in.

She locked the door. "It will give you time to get away, Doris. My roadster is right outside."

Doris clutched Beatrice by the hand. "All right. Only—I'm going to give myself up—in the nearest town."

"No—don't. Wait. I'll give you some money. Drive toward Canada, and Rocky will overtake you at—at—let me see—at Burlington."

"No, Beatrice. It's too late. And tell Rocky if he comes, I'll swear I've never seen him before."

"No, Doris. No."

"Yes. Please. You've done so much. I can't stand it. It would break my heart if you got in trouble."

Beatrice had found her purse. She gave it to Doris.

"The key to the car's inside."

Doris ran through the door on the screened porch, and out over the lawn to the side road. She slid into the seat, and inserted the key. The car started. Her hands were on the wheel, her feet at home on clutch and brake. She did not stop to think that she knew how to run a car. She drove.

She came out on the highway and hesitated for the fraction of an instant—to the right lay the town, St. Gardens' town—the place where Rocky was known. She must go the other way, then.

A car was coming from the town. It might be bringing Rocky from the train. She could not resist a fleeting glance. It was not Rocky's car—and he would be in his own car because he had driven it to the train. She drew a deep breath. Did she hope Rocky would come and save her? She must not allow herself to think that.

She turned away from the approaching car—a mud-spattered black sedan. She had not seen who was driving. If it wasn't Rocky it didn't much matter. Now she was on the smooth cement, and finding that Beatrice's car could certainly go.

She was doing seventy, and the speedometer was slowly mounting. Perhaps she would be arrested for speeding. All the better. Then she would be able to tell the cop who arrested her herself. She wouldn't even have to think about giving herself up.

As she drove she caught sight of another car in the mirror. Was she being pursued after all?

Her foot on the accelerator, she soon lost sight of the car behind. Now the signs of a town were appearing at last. And here was the little hidden road she had hoped for. She turned sharply and began pumping over a dirt road toward a broad bend. Here she brought the car to a standstill and left it. If that sedan was really pursuing her, this ought to throw it off the track.

She climbed a fence, and found herself in a cemetery. A small breeze sighed gently, the odor of white phlox came from behind a white stone. It was time to find an officer of the law, time to give herself up.

She must do it. If she didn't, Molly would do it, and involve Beatrice and Rocky.

She had come out on the road by now, and was approaching three half-grown men who were standing under a large elm tree and staring at her curiously. She stopped before the boys.

"Can you tell me where I can find a policeman?"

The boys looked harder than ever. Perhaps they had already guessed why she had come.

A dark eyed stocky boy jerked his head sideways. "You want the constable. That's him."

Under a nearby tree a lanky old man was stretched out with a policeman's cap tilted down over his face.

"Hey, Vance, someone wants to see you!"

It seemed a long time before the tall skinny constable roused himself. As he got to his feet slowly Doris saw that he was a very old man with a stoop in his thin shoulders. He straightened his hat and blinked for a minute inquiringly.

Doris hurried toward him.

"Wa—al now," said the old fellow amiably as she came near, "you want to see me about something?"

The faded hazel of his eyes twinkled down at her kindly.

Doris looked at him, unable to speak for a minute.

"You're the officer of the law in charge in this town?"

"I guess you might call me that," drawled the old fellow slowly.

"I'm—I'm—" It was hard to say who she was. It seemed so ridiculously untrue—"I'm Diane Merrell. The girl wanted for murder. I've come to give myself up."

"Now, now, don't be in such a hurry."

"But—"

"So you're the little girl that done the murder?"

"Yes."

"You don't look so terrible fierce."

"Please—this is hard for me. I—"

She could not make out the old man's attitude. He was stooping over on the ground fumbling for something he had dropped. He found it at last and straightened. It was a pipe. Then he began a long search in his trousers pockets for a pouch full of tobacco.

"When you've been in this world as long as I have," he said slowly, "you'll learn it don't pay to get yourself excited."

"But don't you understand—"

"Why, you're all worked up. You come on into my office and we'll see if we can't straighten this thing out."

Dazedly Doris was beginning to realize that the old man had not taken her seriously. Perhaps he had never heard of Diane Merrell.

He turned and began walking very slowly toward a ramshackle store that was nearby.

Doris followed him.

There was no one in the gloomy interior of the dark store. At the back was a door with "Constable" marked in large black letters. It led into a small office where Doris followed the old man.

He seated himself in a swivel chair very deliberately. "Bout everybody's been in for their mail, so I guess we won't be interrupted," he said.

"I'm afraid you can't have taken what I said very seriously, Constable," said Doris abruptly.

"Wa—al now, let's talk a little bit about it. What makes you think you're Diane Merrell? You know there have been lots of girls found, don't you?"

He went on the constable. "Why now, if I was to arrest you and send you on up to the police in New Jersey you'd be about number ten on the list."

He chuckled. "Don't know a girl should want to be in her shoes, though."

Doris felt that she was wasting time. The office was a blurred jumble. How was she to convince him of her earnestness?

"These smart alec cops around here are willing to arrest anybody that they see around wearing skirts. Why only the other day they arrested the wife of some young fellow that was up visiting the big artist up Jonesboro way—fellow the name of St. Gardens—you surely have heard of him!"

"Yes, I know. I—"

"I'm going to ask you a few questions, and if you can prove to me that you're Diane Merrell, darned if I don't arrest you—" He grinned, showing brown stumps of teeth. "Yes, sir—rather ma'am, I should say, darned if I don't arrest you. Let's see. Now if you are Diane Merrell, you can tell me a few things about yourself, can't you?"

"Why yes, I suppose so—but I shouldn't think—"

"Wa—al, first of all, what's your father's full name?"

She racked her brains. Why hadn't she noticed that when she was reading the papers?

"Why—let's see. Charles—no, John Merrell."

"It's Samuel. But I'll give you another question—" He eyed her humorously.

"Let's see? Where was it you went to school?"

"Why I went to—look here, what is the use of all these questions? If I give myself up for murder, that ought to be enough, isn't it?"

The constable swung himself back to his desk. "Wa—al next time you give yourself up you better get more information. Mr. Merrell's name is Samuel, and I remember you went to Vassar. Now you go on back to your mamma and your papa, I expect they're looking for you right now."

Doris rose. She would have to go on to the next town, find a bigger place. There must be hundreds of policemen who were willing to arrest her.

"Don't know as I ought to let you go. Somebody will be around lookin' for you like as not, and you're liable to get into trouble."

He spoke half to himself. Before he could make up his mind Doris marched out.

"I See It All Now. School Girls Together. Rocky the Big Galahad. No body Would Ever Think of Looking Here for Diane Merrell."

As she made her way through the empty store she noticed the sign, "Western Union." She could send a telegram to her father collect: Samuel Merrell, Morristown, New Jersey. Then if the old man wanted to hold her there, let him.

He was pottering along after her slowly.

"Where's the telegraph operator?"

"Wa—al now, you want to send a telegram?"

"Yes, certainly."

"Who you going to telegraph?"

Doris looked at him silently. She felt that she was being rude to the old man who was being kind to her in his way, but her patience was ebbing.

"I'll tell that to the telegraph operator."

"I'm him."

"But—"

"Yep. I'm him. I'm the postmaster, too, and the storekeeper here. You see I'm quite a fellow in these parts. Wouldn't think it to look at me now, would you?" He handed her a telegraph blank.

"S'pose you want to send it collect?"

"Yes," said Doris furiously.

"All right. Write it out. Let me see what it is."

Doris took hold of the blank angrily. When this old fellow found out the truth he wouldn't be quite so sure of himself. She wrote rapidly:

"Samuel Merrell, Morristown, New Jersey."

"I am here in—"

She interrupted her work to ask, "What is the name of this town?"

"Cherry Corners, Vermont."

Doris wrote—"Cherry Corners, Vermont. I want to give myself up to the police." She signed the message Diane. She handed it to the aged operator, who scrutinized it closely for some seconds.

BEAUTY TALKS

By
MARJORIE DUNCAN

HOME TREATMENT

I AM beginning a series of home treatment lessons and if you will keep the series, study each lesson thoroughly and review frequently, I am sure you will not only find it interesting but beneficial.

First of all, let us always bear in mind that we must feel "beauty" and live "beauty" from within.

Don't lose sight of the mind's influence on beauty. For while we can enhance the depth and color of our eyes with eye shadow and mascara, and the outline of our lips with lip paste, if eyes and lips show a discontented, fretful, cynical or selfish disposition, no make-up will hide it. The expression of our eyes and our lips truly mirror our disposition, our thoughts.

We must also bear in mind the fact that health is the foundation of beauty. All belief to the contrary, it is not possible to be truly beautiful without perfect health. Every part of our body must be in tune. Health is not possible without proper exercise and a sane diet. Granted, that in your home lives or professional lives you are active, you are busy, still there are muscles and organs which are dormant, and only through concentrated, snappy exercise can we gain that vitality so much desired. Five minutes devoted to such exercise will assure a good circulation, bright eyes and clear skin. Diet is important too. Water—eight glasses of it daily—is another health essential and so is fresh air. Regular elimination plays an important part. And restful sleep, too. These fundamentals of health are very closely related to beauty.

Understanding these things, we understand too that beauty creams and lotions play a very important part—but health must help beauty along. Some women expect both health and beauty to pop from a cleansing cream jar. External aids alone are not sufficient.

Now let us start our home treatment. Arrange to have everything that you will need conveniently at hand. It makes for efficiency—saves time. Perhaps you are fortunate enough to have one of the little French hand-decorated poudre tables. Or perhaps you plan to buy an unpainted one (they are reasonably priced and easily painted to harmonize with bathroom or bedroom). If you do not have one, arrange your necessary preparations on a convenient shelf, or in a large box or basket.

Attention is focused on the eyes. Not only the eyes themselves but the lashes and brows. The frame for the eyes should add beauty and expression to the picture. Brows are a more natural, neat line than ever before. Stubborn little hairs that refuse to march in line are plucked—wild ones we call them. But well-behaved brows are merely brushed carefully. Lashes come in for their share of brushing, too, and creaming and coaxing so that they curl intriguingly.

PROPER EQUIPMENT

BEFORE we consider the first step in a home facial, let us see what every woman should have on hand: first—cleansing cream and skin tonic, then a good nourishing and preserving skin food, astringent and a finishing cream if the skin is dry or a finishing lotion if it is normal or oily. The home facial I am outlining is for the woman whose skin is quite normal. For the blemished skin correctives may be necessary but these will be treated subsequently.

Another thing you will need is absorbent cotton, cleansing tissues and do get a roll of two-inch bandage for your tie-up.

Make-up items come next. You should have powder in the proper shade to harmonize with your skin tone, cream rouge to add a bit of color to your cheeks, and lip paste. If your brows are light you will need an eyebrow pencil. But every woman should have an eyebrow brush to brush the lashes and brows free from powder and perhaps a little vaseline to give brows and lashes a little sheen and luster, after the treatment. Mascara in your own particular shade and eye shade to add depth to the eyes are optional.

Having arranged all these beauty articles conveniently, we will also need two small glass bowls and a small piece of ice. First make two small flat pads of absorbent cotton—one pad to apply cleansing cream—another to remove every bit of cream after the treatment. Make the pads by taking a fluffy piece of cotton and squeezing in cold water. Also make a patty by folding a square piece of cotton about six inches.

Always—before starting a treatment, even if it is just a short make-up treatment, apply a head band to protect your hair. If you do not do this you may be inclined to forget your forehead—and they are important these days, aren't they? Or, we may get the hair full of cream or soap or lotions. The headband will protect your hair, preserve your wave, etc. For the headband use a piece of madras about eight inches wide. That will not be bulky as a large hand towel may be. Tuck your hair back. Make two narrow folds in the headband and place across the forehead hair line. Pin at the back of the head.

This Can't Go On

By RAY LEE

This entire column was made up from, and is in my head. So—here it is in a "nutshell."

In discussing the proposed new food and drug act, J. C. Clark of the Central district of the United States Food and Drugs Administration said lipstick, face powder and other cosmetics in the future, may be required to have vitamin content. My own discovery—Cows and bees seven years old, that never grew any larger than a kitten. I fed it continually on condensed milk.

FLASH: Hollywood just broke its own record, 48 hours without a divorce.

A newly married couple I know are leaning toward Ford on the NRA. They don't want to sign it because they can't be true to each other 40 hours a week.

The writer of this column is a member of the NRA. Listen: "I got by 'code' id by head."

My own idea: They change the clock around to suit daylight saving. Now why not jockey the thermometer a little this winter so people won't think its so cold.

A group of socialists are preparing to resurrect Adam and hang him because he was the man who first discovered work.

I have been asked to say a few words on the liquor question. I am not a dry, but still I believe that liquor should be kept down. Whiskey should be controlled by each municipality. Its return must not mark the return of the old corner saloon. This time the saloon should be located more in the center of the block. In some cities they should be closed by 8 in the evening. If you're not drunk by 8, you're not trying.

The annual gifts to the Bensonville Old People's Home from the St. John Evangelical church will be completed Sunday. All who intend to bring their gifts of clothing, vegetables, fruit etc., are reminded to do so no later than Sunday, bringing them either to the home of Fred Capple or to the church.

MRS. MARTHA L. HALL AND DAUGHTER, ELEANOR.

The entertainment given by the Ladies Aid at the High School Auditorium Thursday night was well attended and thoroughly enjoyed. The two playlets, augmented by the musical numbers were very capably presented. Both promoters and participants deserve much credit.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Werner and family have moved from the Wannemacher house to the Hirsch dwelling on Front street formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Everett Cooper who have moved in with Mr. Cooper's mother, Mrs. Kate Cooper.

The play "Gilded Youth" presented last Thursday night at the St. Mary hall by the DeSoto players of Joliet was well attended.

Mrs. Marie Jacobs is attending the Metropolitan Business College in Chicago.

An 8½ pound son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Schoop Sunday in Silver Cross hospital.

The Mokena Garden Club has completed the placing of the Elm trees which they donated for civic work.

Mrs. S. Nebeker entertained her bridge club last Thursday afternoon in the King Tea Room in Joliet.

The Cradle Roll Party held last Wednesday afternoon in St. John Evangelical church was well attended.

There were seventeen grandmothers, thirty-one mothers and 46 babies and little tots.

They were delightfully entertained by Superintendent Mrs. Val Scheer. An interesting talk to the mothers was given by Miss O'Connor a visiting nurse from Cook County who also weighed all the babies. Various games were played by the grownups and winning prizes were handed out by the Superintendent. The little tots were taken care of by two of our Sunday School teachers, the Erickson sisters.

A devotional period preceded this program and a fine luncheon brought the party to a close.
